Ugh! The concept of compound interest is so hard, I guess I will leave it because it won't be of any use in my future, and moreover it'll carry very less marks in my exams.

So, Suhani, what is all the grumbling about?

Dad, I am studying compound interest, but I'm sure it won't be of any help in my future.

Every thing is important in education. Even compound interest.

I don't see the relevance of Compound Interest in normal day to day living.

Ok, let me tell you a story. Then you decide if compound interest is relevant or not.

Ok. But I still say that compound interest is not useful.

The story is about an intelligent Sadhu. Who was summoned by the Maharaj to play a game of chess.

Greeting Guru Ji. The Maharaja has requested your presence in the court tomorrow for a game of chess

Greetings. Please inform the Maharaja that I will surely come tomorrow.

The next day the Sadhu went to meet the Maharaja.

Greeting Guru Ji. I have been told about your intelligence and that you are a very good player of chess.

Greetings Maharaja. What can I say. People have a lot to say now days.

No problem Guru Ji. But now I challenge you to a game of chess.

But what if you loose Maharaj?

IMPOSSIBLE!

And if you are able to defeat me then you can ask for any reward.

Ok Maharaj, just remember your promise.

So the game of chess was played between the Maharaja And the Guru Ji. In the end the Maharaja was defeated.

It looks as though you have lost Maharaj

True Guru Ji. I accept my defeat. Ask, what do you want.

Dad! What did the Guru Ji ask for??????

RICE.

Rice! What a simple thing to ask for.

It was not so simple you see.

The Guru Ji asked for rice by using the 64 squares of the chess board.

64 squares of the chess board? I am confused now.

You must give me rice according to the 64 squares of the chess board.

???????
